B. B. Tournament Was Fine Success

GRAYLING AND ST. JOE WINNERS

LAKE CITY AND ST. MARY'S TAKE CONSOLATIONS

The district high school basketball tournament closed Saturday night in a blaze of glory. It was not until the final gong sounded in the last game that the final winners were determined.

The happy warriors of the basketball court to win honors are Grayling, champions in class C; St. Joe, West Branch, champions in class D; and Lake City, class C and St. Mary's, Gaylord, class D winners of consolation prizes.

The judges for awarding the cup to the "player who had the record of being the cleanest player, who best knew the game and played the best teamwork" were deadlocked. The honors stood between Charles Wylie, Grayling, and Amos Schreuer of Gaylord. This prize was offered by the school board who decided the matter of winner by saying that since the judges could not agree and that since the players of Grayling team already had the honor of being district class C champions that they were glad to pass this honor on to one of the Gaylord players, thus Mr. Schreuer was awarded that prize. It is a fine privilege to even be considered for such an honor. Both Mr. Wylie and Mr. Schreuer are ideal examples of high school athletes.

Storms and late trains somewhat delayed the starting of the schedule of games. The heavy storm and blizzard of Wednesday night practically blocked all highway traffic Thursday until late in the day. Prescott, Beaverton and McBain arrived Wednesday afternoon. Gaylord, Vanderbilt, Roscommon and West Branch teams came by train Thursday afternoon. Houghton Lake managed to get in early Thursday evening. Lake City was the last to arrive. The boys report that it took them two hours to make the first five miles of the trip. They followed the snowplow most of the way to Grayling arriving at about 11:00 p. m. Part of the time they had to get out and help shovel out the snowplow. It was a tough trip no doubt. Gaylord was awaiting them expecting to play that night, however the Lake City coach called Mr. Thompson of Lansing, the state tournament manager and the game was ordered played the following morning.

Events of special interest to Grayling people started when the referee's whistle blew starting the Grayling-West Branch game. Thursday evening. It ended with Grayling leading 20 to 14.

Gaylord defeated Lake City Friday morning so the next clash was with Grayling Friday night. This was the most thrilling game of the tournament. Gaylord led at the first half but were overcome by the locals in the last quarter. The closing minutes the game stood Grayling 17, Gaylord

16. A double foul was called and Fox for Gaylord sunk the ball through the hoop while Wylie missed thus tying the score. The game ended 17 all. In the three minute play-off Grayling got the tip-off and carried the ball right under their basket but missed the shot, losing the ball. By some wonderfully clever passing Rudy Harrison sunk two field throws for four counts. The gong sounded with Grayling 21 to their opponents 17. Both teams played stellar ball throughout the entire game. There was some wonderful passing and equally effective guarding on the part of both teams. Elmer Neal was the high scorer with 14 points to his credit. He was making his shots and his teammates saw to it that the ball was passed to him. Six points were made by Harrison and to him goes the credit of making the winning baskets. Wylie is credited with a free throw for one point. There was very little fouling on the part of the players of either team. This victory gave Grayling the class C championship. It was agreed by the coaches that the losers would be eliminated and would not play either West Branch or Lake City. That left the consolation championship up to the winner of the latter teams.

Roscommon, whose players are almost as well known to Grayling court patrons as our own, had an easy victory over Prescott on Thursday evening. The score was Roscommon 29; Prescott 19. Matheson led in the scoring with 13 points and Curnalia next with 10 points. Their hardest game was with Beaverton when they lost by a score of 19 to 13. Beaverton lost in the final to St. Joe 19 to 18.

The clash between Beaverton and West Branch St. Joe was the final of the tournament. This also was a very fast game. Beaverton's slight lead was overcome during the last period and ended 19 to 18 in favor of St. Joe.

Wonderful School Spirit
Thruout the games there was plenty of pep and yells. Grayling pupils under the leadership of Elizabeth Matson, captain of Grayling girls team and Nels Olson lead the cheer-report that it took them two hours to make the first five miles of the trip. They followed the snowplow most of the way to Grayling arriving at about 11:00 p. m. Part of the time they had to get out and help shovel out the snowplow. It was a tough trip no doubt. Gaylord was awaiting them expecting to play that night, however the Lake City coach called Mr. Thompson of Lansing, the state tournament manager and the game was ordered played the following morning.

upon us still the attendance was wonderful and on Friday and Saturday nights there was hardly standing room in the big gym.

Supt. Bogue in his remarks as he was about to hand out the trophies to the winning teams complimented the crowd for their fine sportsmanship and orderliness. With a few complimentary remarks Grayling, West Branch St. Joe and Lake City were awarded the trophies they had so valiantly won.

At this time the cup offered by the Board of Education was awarded by Dr. Keyport, president of the board. He explained how it was that the judges had decided upon two players—Charles Wylie of Grayling team and Amos Schreuer of Gaylord. Each was called before the large audience and both were warmly applauded. While Grayling people would have liked to have the honors fall to Mr. Wylie yet we believe the decision to give the cup to Mr. Schreuer was fair enough.

Roy O. Milnes of Grayling and Harold Huebner of Saginaw were the official referees thruout the tournament and everyone seemed well satisfied with their services.

About 125 high school boys with their coaches were present in the city for the three days and we have heard nothing but praise for the splendid manner in which they conducted themselves while here. Each young man was a credit to the school he represented.

ONLY 49 VOTE AT VILLAGE ELECTION

ONE TICKET GETS UNANIMOUS VOTE

Village elections are as rule pretty tame affairs and last Monday was no exception. Only 49 of our citizens exercised the right of suffrage. The list of candidates as selected by the Citizens caucus was elected without one dissenting vote.

The newly elected officers are as follows:

President—Christian W. Olsen.
Clerk—Lorane Sparkes.
Treasurer—Herluf Sorenson.
Assessor—James W. Sorenson.
Trustees—E. G. Shaw, Walter Nau, and Thomas Cassidy.

GOODFELLOWSHIP CLUB NOTES

The Goodfellowship club met at the home of Mrs. Ernest Larsen. The program was in charge of Mrs. H. A. Bauman who read an article on the Japanese cherry trees of Washington, D. C. The hostess served lunch.

WOMAN'S CLUB NOTES

Regular meeting of the club was held Monday evening, March 11th, at the home of Mrs. George McCullough. Roll call. Minutes of previous meeting read and approved.

Business.

Mrs. Gertrude Peterson read several paragraphs on correct manner in which to conduct meetings, manner of addressing the chair, of voting, etc.

Mrs. Anna Heribson gave a splendid report on the State Federation meeting at Sault Ste. Marie, to which she was sent as delegate.

Next week the club will meet at the home of Mrs. Laura Giegling.

E. M. T. HAS SPACE AT TWO OUT-DOOR LIFE SHOWS

(By E. M. T. Service)
Two outdoor life shows this spring will bring to the attention of people from different parts of the country the recreational appeals of Michigan and other states. One is a show at Detroit, April 20 to 27, and another one at Chicago, May 5 to 11. The East Michigan Tourist association will be represented at both shows. Letters have been sent by the association to members who may be interested in space at either or both.

The association has an option on desirable locations at both shows which is available through the association to members, chambers of commerce, resort organizations, etc.

The Detroit show is apparently proving the most popular with members of the association and already a number of members have asked the association to make reservations for them. This show is a new enterprise.

Last year Michigan dominated the Chicago Show, which was held at the Coliseum.

SECRETARY MELLON

Some members of the United States senate, including Senator Couzens, of Michigan, are opposing the appointment of Secretary Mellon as the head of the treasury department in the cabinet of President Hoover.

Mr. Mellon has been just the kind of a man that the nation has needed in these times of financial readjustment. His experience has been placed at the service of the United States.

Some have said that Andrew Mellon has been the greatest secretary of the treasury since Alexander Hamilton. Maybe if we would read some more about Alexander Hamilton we could easily raise Mr. Mellon to the honor of the greatest secretary of the treasury in the nation's history.

NOTICE

The Grayling Township Board will meet at the Town hall on Tuesday, March 19, 1929 at from 9 o'clock a. m. to 4 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of auditing and settling all claims against the township.

G. O. McCULLOUGH, Clerk.

THE WEEK IN WASHINGTON

(By Congressman Roy O. Woodruff.)

The Seventieth Congress came to a close Monday noon, March 4th, just an hour before the new President was inaugurated. In spite of a driving rain and discomforts that are endured when the weather is all that it shouldn't be, a crowd of forty thousand were gathered at the east front of the Capitol building to witness the ceremonies and hear Mr. Hoover's address.

President Hoover has called the Congress to meet in special session April 15th to give consideration to tariff legislation, farm relief legislation, census and reapportionment legislation, and also the national origins clause of the present immigration law will be taken up.

During the recess I will remain in Washington and go thoroughly into all aspects of the tariff and farm relief problems, preparatory to making the strongest appeal I know how in behalf of increasing the duty on sugar and other agricultural commodities where the duty is now insufficient to protect our own interests.

The chairman of the House Committee on agriculture has sent out notices to all members of the House that his committee will meet on March 27th for the purpose of holding hearings to aid in drafting a new farm relief measure. I shall attend these hearings and do what I can to influence the drafting of a bill that will meet with universal approval.

The new Attorney General, William D. Mitchell, has announced that he will personally argue before the Supreme Court on March 11th the so-called pocket-veto case. This case involves the construction of the word "Adjournment" in Section 7, Article 1 of the constitution, as applied to sessions of Congress and the question presented is whether this word refers to a final adjournment of Congress or the case of an adjournment of a session of Congress which is not the final session of the particular Congress.

If the Supreme Court should decide against the government in this case, then the Muscle Shoals Bill and hundreds of others would doubtless take on the status of law, much to the confusion of the executive machinery of the government. It was a case involving Indian lands that caused this suit to be brought up to the Supreme Court, but the most striking example of the pocket veto in recent years is the Muscle Shoals Bill, which was passed by Congress in the first session of the 70th Congress and was given a pocket veto by President Coolidge's failure to sign it before adjournment of that session. It is hardly conceivable, however, that the Supreme Court will decide against the government in a case involving so much retroactive legislation.

Congressman W. Frank James of Hancock, Michigan, who has represented the Twelfth Congressional District of Michigan in the House since March 4, 1915, became chairman of the important Military Affairs Committee of the House with passing of the 70th Congress. This gives the State of Michigan a powerful voice in the military affairs of the government. Congressman James has the respect of the Army and War Department officials for his courage, his fairness and his knowledge of their problems. He has in the past few years traveled thousands of miles by airplane from one end of the country to the other inspecting army posts and forts. He served in the Spanish War in Co. F 34th Michigan Infantry.

Of particular interest to residents of Isabella county is the fact that the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils of the U. S. Department of Agriculture has just published a booklet giving information regarding the climate, soil and agriculture of that county. The booklet also contains a large map of the county showing in minute detail the soil variations and other interesting features. I am able to supply these booklets on request, as I have something like 1500 copies allotted to me.

MICH. LEGISLATIVE NEWS LETTER

Michigan Press Association, Lansing Bureau

Relief came Friday morning to the dry interests when the House passed the Culbertson bill which puts teeth into the prohibition laws and makes them workable and enforceable, while making a discrimination between minor offenders against the laws and the mercantile moonshiner and bootlegger. The latter class still comes under the life sentence proposition for fourth convictions. The measure now goes to the Senate for its approval.

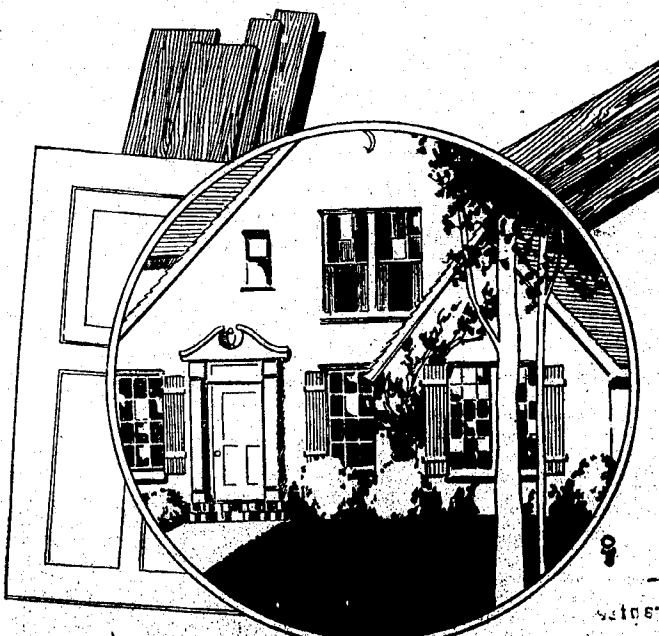

Unnumerable propositions for raising revenues are coming up in both houses and the members of the finance committee of the Senate and the ways and means committee of the House are working overtime in their endeavors to sort out the most tangible and workable of the measures. The chances for any special tax grow less and less as the days go by, unless it may be something along the line of licensing of billboards or some removal of certain securities and properties from taxation exemption. Any such proposition immediately has some enthusiastic support, but it takes quite a bunch of votes to pass any kind of a measure. Representative Snow has introduced another income tax bill, but there is bitter opposition to any income tax proposal.

There was a lot of machine-gun oratory Thursday forenoon at a public hearing on bible reading in schools and before it closed there was much animosity apparent. The bill is still in committee, however, and may stay there.

The Senate has passed the Conlon Turner's measure which allows school boards of cities and villages to borrow up to 50% of anticipated tax returns, in any year, in case the money is urgently needed for building construction or additions, or other emergency.

A concurrent resolution has passed both branches inviting President Hoover and other dignitaries to attend the anniversary celebration in Jackson July 4, 5, and 6 of the founding of the Republican party. Representative Anderson registered one of three votes against the resolution, the others being the democratic members of the House. Mr. Anderson was properly disciplined Thursday when the House emphatically voted "No" on his bill providing that government standards should apply in Michigan in all cases where state laws did not govern. It was a good measure and on Friday morning was taken up on a motion to reconsider and was passed

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—In New York, Hugh Chesby, English word with a treasure in Constantinople in the existence of which over some old documents he believes. A cablegram notifies Hugh of his uncle's death. Lord Chesby, a learned man from Watkins, Lord Chesby's friend, that the old gentleman has died. A stranger, supporting a friend of Hugh, a mysterious telephone message, notifies that his uncle is in a hospital, dying, victim of an assassin. Before his death he has been stabbed by "Toutou." With Lord Chesby's body Hugh and Jack sail for England.

CHAPTER II—In London Hugh and Jack meet their buddy, Nikka Zarnko, famous gypsy violinist, and over some old documents, seemingly having a bearing on the treasure and its location, they find out that the treasure is in Constantinople, as mentioned.

CHAPTER III—Monty Hillyer, man of shady reputation, but owner of a neighboring estate, calls on Hugh with a party of friends, mostly foreigners, one of them, introduced as "Signor Teodoroschi," an Italian, makes a distinctly unfavorable impression on Jack. Conversation turns on the "Prior's Veil." When the party leaves, Jack asserts his belief that he has found a clue to the blocked-up room.

CHAPTER IV—That night Jack, awakened from "slumber," discovers three men, one of them, Teodoroschi, in the library. He calls Hugh and Nikka, and in a light one of the invaders is killed. The others escape. Jack is sure Teodoroschi is "Toutou," and that the three men were seeking the "Prior's Veil" for a clue to the treasure. He and his friends find the hidden room and in it discover that the treasure is in Constantinople.

CHAPTER V—Jack, Nikka's cousin, Betty King, with her uncle, is in Constantinople, and Hugh, Nikka, Jack, and Watkins set out for the Turkish capital. On the way Toutou and a female accomplice kidnap Jack in an effort to learn from him where the treasure is concealed. The fact that Hugh and his friends realize Hillyer's name knows the object of their journey and that their lives are in danger.

CHAPTER VI—The party splits. Hugh and Watkins proceed to Constantinople by sea and Jack and Nikka by land. Nikka persuades his uncle, Wasso Mikal, gypsy chief, to accompany them. Mikal has heard of the treasure, which by repute is concealed in a house occupied by a gypsy tribe whose leader is Seram Tokalji.

CHAPTER VII—Jack and Nikka don gypsy costumes, and with Mikal and six of his followers reach Constantinople. There they join Hugh and Watkins. The girl's uncle, Vernon King, archeological expert, King has located the house of the treasure, on the site of the old palace of the Bucoleon, which is occupied, as Mikal says, by a gypsy tribe, and Nikka, by Tokalji, a number of his gypsy followers.

CHAPTER VIII—By a clever ruse, Nikka and Jack gain access to Tokalji's house as gypsy influences from justice, and are made welcome. To the treasure is being sought. A beautiful, wild young gypsy girl, Kara, is evidently much attracted by Nikka. There is evidence they are actually in the palace of the Bucoleon.

CHAPTER IX—Toutou and the rest of Hillyer's party come to Constantinople. Nikka and Jack are recognized. Toutou endeavors to make them prisoners, but they escape with the aid of Kara's active assistance, escape from the place and reach Wasso Mikal safely.

CHAPTER X—From Helena de Cespedes member of Hillyer's crowd, they learn it was Toutou who killed Lord Chesby, and that the circumstances were favorable. Hugh's party decides to invade Tokalji's house that night, by sea, using Betty King as a decoy. The plan is to enter the house by the main party of the invaders, escape when they see that the attempted surprise has failed.

CHAPTER XI—Toutou determined to learn what Hugh and his friends know of the location of the treasure, tortures Nikka. Kara saves him. King and Watkins stumble onto a drain leading to the treasure, off which the gypsy reaches the three friends, bringing them to safety. Hillyer's statements reveal everything to the Turkish government unless Hugh agrees to a division of the treasure, when Hugh temporizes.

"You said this afternoon we had our back to the wall," said Hugh. "You're right. They've licked us. Our only chance is to clean them up."

The room telephone rang. King answered it.

"Send him up," he said. And to Nikka: "A gypsy asking you."

"That will be Wasso Mikal," cried Nikka. "He must have learned something. I thought he would. Don't be downhearted, Hugh. This hand is a long way from being played out. It is as I thought all along; we have got to meet savagery with savagery. It is a case of kill or be killed."

"But Betty!" exclaimed Vernon King. "Think of her! What will they do?"

"I am thinking of her," retorted Nikka. "If we hope to rescue her, we must strike hard. Give them time, let them strengthen their position—and she will go to some harem in Anatolia or to a procurer in Salonika. I tell you, I know. We are dealing with men and women who have no mercy, who fight like animals, who are animals. Well, from now on, Nikka Zarnko will meet them on their own ground."

There was a knock on the door. Wasso Mikal entered, his gypsy dress in striking contrast to the western furnishings and our own conventional garments.

"I greet you, son of my sister," he said, smiling. "My young men, watching the Sokaki Masevri! This evening, behold Tokalji's party carry in a bundle in sack, which was a body. I have hastened that you should know it."

Nikka clasped his hand.

"It is well, my uncle. I thank you for the news. This is a night of blood. We shall all dip our blades before the sun rises tomorrow."

"My heart is glad," replied Wasso Mikal, with flashing eyes. "My young men's knives are eager. Their hands are ready. What is the plan?"

Nikka turned to us.

"I must go with my people," he said. "Hugh, do you and Jack remain you could keep the gang in play by a surprise attack through the drain? That would give us a chance to force the street entrance, and we should have them between two fires."

"And where am I going to go?" demanded Vernon King indignantly.

"This will be a nasty affair, professor," returned Nikka. "You ought to say out. We are younger men, and we are used to this kind of thing."

"Betty is my daughter, and I am as able to fight for her as any of you," answered King. "I know how to handle a pistol."

"We ought not to refuse, you know," said Hugh. "Every man is going to count."

"I certainly expect to be counted," replied King.

"Me, too, your lordship and Mr. Nikka, sir," spoke up Waty, lunging to his feet. "Yes, I will, gentlemen. You give me another glass of that, 'ore whisky or arak or whatever it is, and I'll fight 'em all by myself. Yes, I will. And I guess I can swing a crowbar, if I've got a bump on my head. Let me at 'em, gentlemen, only let me. That's all I ask."

It was beginning to rain when we left the hotel, with occasional peals of thunder; but we welcomed the change in the weather as a factor aiding the surprise attack we had intended. At the Galata end of the lower bridge, which was deserted as usual after dark, we dismissed our taxi, and held a final brief council of war in a patch of shadows next to the bridge abutment. King, Hugh, Watkins and I were to embark on the Curlew, while Nikka and Wasso Mikal tramped to the Khan of the Georgians and rallied Mikal's six young men. Then they were to go to Sokaki Masevri and wait for a pistol shot, which would be the signal that we had passed through the drain and were at grips with the enemy. Hugh and Nikka compared watches and agreed that we should be in Tokalji's house not later than half-past ten.

The rain let up as we shook hands and wished each other luck, but by the time the Curlew was chugging down the Golden Horn it had set in again with a violent violence, lashed on by a noisiest gale. At intervals broad splashes of lightning bathed the sky to our right in a ghastly greenish glow. And when we emerged into the Bosphorus we found a fairly high sea running, but the lurch steadily thrust her bow into the waves and rode buoyantly over them. We cautiously felt our way along, lights out, motor running at half speed, taking bearings whenever the jagged lightning streaks illuminated the waters.

I was worried by the frequency of the lightning displays, but fortunately we sighted the round tower on the walls, which was our first landmark for Tokalji's house. There was a lull in the storm. We were also favored in having the old sea walls act as a lee for us and we worked in closer to the shore. The waves moderated, and the fish-hook curve of the ruined jetty broke their remaining force. When Watkins had made fast bow and stern lines to a couple of masses of battered masonry the Curlew floated almost as easily as at her moorings by the Man-o-war dock. But the difficulties of navigation in the darkness and the necessity for extreme care had slowed our progress, and we were some minutes behind our schedule. The rocks of the jetty, too, were awash, and it was as much as your life was worth to slip, for a full might mean a broken head or limb. At one point, indeed, several of us lost the jetty altogether and were obliged to swim half a dozen strokes to the beach. Watkins, who insisted on arming himself with a crowbar, would have drowned if Hugh had not hauled him in by the scruff of the neck. It was impossible to see anything, except once when a lightning flash streaked the sky and struck with a stunning report in Scutari across the Straits. And then we were so afraid of being discovered that we froze stiff as close to the rocks as possible.

The beach, like the jetty, was under water. The waves lapped up to the foot of the walls, and we stumbled desperately over submerged rocks and boulders. Watkins, just ahead of me in line, tripped, and very nearly knocked my brains out with his infernal crowbar. I begged him to drop it, but he doggedly refused.

"I'm no knife fighter, Mister Jack, sir," he said, "and I'm intending to give the persons that 'me a taste of their own stew like."

We identified the opening of the sewer by the hollow, booming sound with which, every now and then, an unusually high wave would roll over its lip. It sounded like the beating of a water-hammer drum. The rain was driving down again, and the wind howled overhead with a shrill vehemence that was deafening.

"We'll never be able to get through that 'ell-hole tonight, Mister Jack, sir," screamed Watkins in my ear. "We'll be drowned with the rats."

I was somewhat of Waty's opinion. myself, but managed to placate him. Hugh, without any hesitation, yelled: "One at a time!" and slipped into the sewer month between two waves. King followed him, and Waty and I brought up the rear. We were cheered to find the place less terrifying than we had imagined it. The water was thigh-deep, instead of knee-deep, as it had been when we escaped from the dungeon; but even so had fumbled our way by torchlight over the jagged moraine that blocked the first thirty feet, the footing became safer and the water shallower.

Just the same, I never think of the place without shuddering. It was dark, silent, except for the ceaseless seepage of moisture, the occasional muffled boom of a wave splashing over its mouth and the squeaking of the gigantic black rats that swam ahead of us or wriggled into cracks in the serried courses of the masonry. Our electric torches shone feebly on the mossy walls, with their sickening fungus growths, their bright green, pendent weeds. Amorphous plants hung from the roof. The atmosphere was slimy, noxious, unclear. And always there was the "drip-drip-drip" of water.

We breathed more comfortably when our torches revealed overhead the bars of the stone grating in the floor of the dungeon.

"All quiet above," whispered Hugh, after listening intently. "Dark as B-I, too. I say, how much farther do you suppose this drain goes?"

He trained his torch into the thick murk of the immense tube which extended beyond the grating as far as our eyes could penetrate.

"I'm inclined to believe it continues into the city, probably as far as the site of the forum of Theodosius," King replied, his scholar's interest awake.

"That was a region of palaces which would have required such a work of engineering. It should be well worth exploring."

"Never mind that now," urged Hugh. "We have another task on hand."

He pried up the grating with Waty's crowbar, the butt of which we rested on the ledge in which the grating fitted. This secured a space sufficiently wide for us to squeeze through, and after all of us had climbed up we eased the grating back into its led, so that there was no trace remaining of our entrance.

The dungeon was the "cave barren cube of dirty stone that we had left by virtue of Watkins' aid. The ropes that had bound us, were still on the floor where we had cast them. The door we had broken leaned against the wall. Obviously, Tokalji and his people never even suspected how we escaped.

It was five minutes to eleven when we gained the dungeon, and we knew that Nikka must be at a loss to account for our failure to signal him. He might suppose us to be casualties of the storm, and in desperation, attack alone on his own account. So we wasted no time, beyond shaking the water from our clothes.

The lower passage and cellars were deserted, but as we climbed the stairs leading to the central hall opening on the little atrium between the Garden of the Cedars and the large chamber which Tokalji occupied we heard a distant murmur of voices in disagreement. Investigation proved the hall to be unoccupied, and we were presently grouped on its uneven floor, with only a curtain separating us from the drama going on in the atrium. The rain was drumming down overhead; the wind howled with undiminished force; and at intervals the thunder boomed like a barrage of 155s.

"No, you are wrong, Toutou. It is everybody's business," said Hillyer in French.

"You may be chief, but you have no right to risk common property," protested Sandra's resonant voice.

Toutou snarled something in his guttural, indistinct, animal speech.

"—like her, and that's enough," it concluded. "I'm tired of the rest of you. Bunglers, every one."

"Have it your own way," said Serge, "but it's no business. She's worth so much to us."

"One might suppose a green youth, cut in Maude Hillyer's graven tones. "Why should you endanger our coup for a colorless chit like—"

"I say there is no risk," snapped Toutou. "What do I care for them? What does it matter what they—"

"Yes, yes," interrupted Hillyer, "but you Continentals don't appreciate the Anglo-Saxons' feeling about their women. You—"

"Have done," bellowed Toutou with a sudden flame of temper. "Urrrrrrrrrr! Am I not the master? I want her, and I shall have her! Go! Go! I say, or shall you behold Toutou's knife?"

They evidently went, for we could hear the shuffling of feet, with an undercurrent of muttered curses and oburgations. Hugh started forward, pistol in hand, but I checked him. This was no time for unpremeditated action. There was a moment of silence—and a woman's cry of hatred.

"Leave me alone, you beast! If you touch me, I'll bite you! You can't bind my teeth. Ah—"

It was Betty's voice, and Hugh shook his head and was at the curtain with his hand on the folds before I could reach him. But reach him I did, and another interruption helped me to restrain him. King, his face white and his hands shaking, joined us. Watkins lurked behind us.

"Let me—!" gasped Hugh. "There's plenty of time, you fool," I hissed. "Wait! Somebody—"

I was going to say somebody might come back, and the somebody cut my sentence in the middle. A door opened, and the voice of Helena de Cespedes spoke.

"What is this I hear, mon ami?" she asked. "Are you mad? This girl is the spoil of the band. She belongs to all of us. We are holding her for a bigger stake. Shall we let you have her for your own satisfaction? You take too—"

"You are jealous," snarled Toutou. "I say I want her, and I am going to have her. I am tired of women like you."

Hugh, his nerves under control, gently parted the folds of the curtain with his pistol muzzle. The atrium was brilliantly lighted. He and I could see perfectly. On a divan heaped with cushions lay Betty. Her hands were bound behind her, and her feet were tied loosely. Her hair was ruffled, and her blouse ripped off at the shoulder. But her eyes sparkled as she stared fearlessly at the monster who stood beside her.

Toutou was in a different mood from any I knew, or, rather, I should say, from the one I knew. His sinisterly beautiful face revealed the latent ferocity that was the greatest feature of his character. He said there was something else, something difficult to define. The tigerish glare in his eyes was replaced by a softer light; the pupils were expanded. His mouth was slack. His movements were uncertain. He hovered over Betty, looking almost fearfully at Helena.

She stood just inside the door that communicated with the large outer chamber. She was dressed in a sports suit and high boots. Her hat was off, and her face showed pinched and wan. There were shadows under her eyes.

"Say I am jealous," she answered steadily. "I have a right to be. You have never had a woman who did more for you than I. Do you think Miss Innocence here would do what I have done?"

"That is why I want her," returned Toutou, his voice singularly hoarse. "For where we had cast them. The door we had broken leaned against the wall. Obviously, Tokalji and his people never even suspected how we escaped."

"I am tired of you. I am tired of all of you. I hunger for innocence. I wish to forget crime and evil. When we finish this job I am going to take this girl and go away where Toutou will be unknown."

"Toutou LaFitte a reformed character," Helena laughed sarcastically. "You don't know what you are talking about. You have nothing in common with innocence."

"Who knows?"

"I know, mon ami. The girl would kill herself first. Sooner than see you do this. I will kill you."

Toutou frowned at her.

Helene stepped forward boldly, one hand inside her jacket.

"There are many things you can do, Toutou," she said. "And you are chief. Nobody questions that. But remember that if the others are afraid of you, I am not. And I say that you shall not do this. Something you owe to the band. More, still, you owe to me. You know me well enough to appreciate that I intend to secure what I consider due me."

Toutou growled in his throat, and his pupils began to contract. The slack left his mouth.

"It is time you feared me," he snarled. "Go away, I am through with you. I never wish to see you again. You shall have your share of this coup, then you shall leave the band."

"But I thought there was to be no more band," sneered Helena. "I thought Toutou was to become an honest bourgeois, with a dove-cot—"

"You shall feel my knife," he barked at her.

"Why should I feel your knife?" she retorted. "The last time a woman threatened you, you fled from her knife."

Her face was white with rage, and Toutou's whole frame seemed to draw together as an animal does when it prepares to spring. His long arms curved before him, his right hand at the level of his belt.

"You do not know when a man tries of you, it seems," he exclaimed. "An you not see we wish to be by ourselves?"

She made a violent effort to regain her self-control.

"r the last time," she said quietly, "will you heed the opinion of your colleagues and leave this girl alone?"

"No," he growled savagely. "Go, you—"

"Look out," cried Betty, who alone of us all could see clearly what Toutou was doing with his right hand. "His knife!"

Helene snatched a pistol from her blouse; but he was too quick for her. As the flame spurted from the barrel he leaped aside, and his immensely long arm curved out and slashed down. The blood frothed over the hilt of his knife as it, clicked on her collarbone, and she dropped, choking, to the floor.

In the same instant Hugh fired, but one of us jostled him and the bullet missed. Toutou turned, saw the curtain swaying as we charged, and ran for the door. I fired once, and the bullet clipped his arm and side, but he was out before we could shoot again.

From the courtyard came a crash and a ripple of shots that ried with the thunder. A chorus of yells pierced thinly the howling of the gale.

Nikka, hearing Helena's pistol, had accepted it as the long overdue signal for his attack.

"Take care of Betty, professor!" Hugh called to King. "See if you can help this poor girl. Come on, Jack, Waty!"

The "Hole" of the Coconut

A coconut with a hole in one end makes a good receptacle for food to attract birds, and one that will withstand bad weather. Put the nut in a holder made of wire netting and hang it by wire on a tree limb. If the hole is made small, large birds can not gobble up the contents of the holder. Birds will eat the coconut meat as well as suet, nuts, and other food put there.

Local Happenings

THURSDAY, MARCH 14, 1929

Mrs. B. A. Cooley and Mrs. Hans L. Peterson were Gaylord callers yesterday.

Mrs. John Erkes has returned to her home at the Military reservation after a number of weeks spent in the southern part of the state.

Mrs. George Crabtree of Lapeer visited Miss Fern Armstrong and grandmother, Mrs. Mary Colladay Tuesday.

Mrs. Roy Barber returned yesterday from Vanderbil where she had been in attendance at the funeral of a relative.

Mrs. Arthur Waite (Ellen Smith) and two children of Midland are here for a couple of weeks visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elzey Waite.

Mrs. Emil Niederer entertained two tables of "500" at her home Saturday evening, Miss Jane Ingley holding the high score, while Mrs. Peter L. Brown won the consolation.

Fresh milk, cream and butter. Quality guaranteed. Grayling Dairy.

Mrs. Alex Weaver of Johannesburg is in the city visiting her son Curtis, who is a patient at Mercy Hospital. While here Mrs. Weaver is a guest of her sister, Mrs. Dan Hoesli.

Miss Kathryn Brown will leave Saturday night for Bay City to visit her brother Carlyle, who is employed there, and later will go to Flint for a few days visit.

One of the prettiest Easter window displays ever seen in Grayling is at the 5c to $1 store, next to the post-office. Mrs. Sales did the trimming and is receiving a lot of deserved compliments.

Spring coats, hats and dresses are coming in now at Redson & Cooley's. Come in and pick out your Easter outfit.

There are several who have said that they wanted one of the Grayling Cook books, before they were all gone and as the supply is getting low it would be well for them to get them at once. Mrs. Laurant has a supply at the Avalanche office.

Mrs. H. C. Schmidt, who was in Flint for the winter months was in Grayling for a couple of days the last of the week. She left Sunday night for Ann Arbor called there by the illness of her sister. She intends to remain in Grayling again indefinitely.

Jess Schoonover, Carl Parsons and Lars Rasmussen went to Flint Tuesday and drove back a fine new Buick sedan for the latter. While there they went through the Buick factory and saw how these cars are made.

Peter McNeven is in Grayling today on business.

As we are about to go to press the sad news reaches this office of the death this forenoon of Jack Kraus at Mercy Hospital after a two weeks illness of spinal meningitis. Jack was 13 years old, a pupil of the seventh grade and the son of Mrs. F. A. Barnett.

Grayling Lodge F. & A. M. is going to Gaylord Tuesday night to confer the 3rd degree. Victor Petersen, son of Mayor Petersen of this city will be one of the candidates. Members of the Fellowship team are requested to report at the lodge rooms next Monday night for practice.

For your Easter outfit call on Redson & Cooley's. We have a fine showing of coats, hats, and dresses.

There has been a grand rush to get income tax returns in the mails so as to reach the office of the internal revenue collector in Detroit before the time limit—March 15th.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Douglas and little son have returned to Grayling after a week spent with the former's mother, Mrs. T. E. Douglas at Lovell.

Spring weather this week has reduced the snow a lot. The down town streets are nearly free from snow and ice. Rains of Wednesday and that night have cleaned things up considerably. However we don't intend to be fooled by believing that spring is here to stay. We are still in the month of March.

Word has been received of the death Tuesday at the Monroe Hospital, Monroe, of Mrs. Frank H. Cookson, wife of Rev. Cookson, former district superintendent of the Methodist conference. At present Rev. Cookson is pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, Monroe. Mrs. Cookson, besides her husband, is survived by her mother, two daughters and three sons.

At the regular meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary society yesterday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. P. G. Zalsman, at which Mrs. Zalsman and Mrs. Emil Niederer were hostesses, there were 65 members and visitors present. Mrs. John Zeder had charge of the program, which was symbolic of Easter. Rev. J. W. Greenwood and Mr. E. H. Webb entertained with a solo and little Madeline Greenwood sweetly sang an Easter song.

Our High school basket ball team leaves for Mt. Pleasant tomorrow to participate in the regional tournament. In the draw for games Grayling drew a bye so that they don't have to be there on the first day, while Clare and Durand will start the first elimination game in class C. Grayling will play the winner of that game Friday night. The girls team have been privileged to attend the tournament and will go in a body accompanied by their coach Mrs. Bogue. Quite a number of others from here also will accompany the team and help to cheer them to victory.

Frank Anstett left Friday to take up his new duties for the Western Union Telegraph Co. in Saginaw, having recently secured a transfer to that city. Charles Sey of St. Charles is the new operator arriving Friday to assume his duties here. Mr. Anstett had been at the local office continuously for close on to 19 years, coming here from Vanderbilt. Both he and Mrs. Anstett, the latter who has been prominent in social and club circles have hosts of friends who regret their leaving our city. Mrs. Anstett will go as soon as they have found a suitable house in Saginaw. Their home here will be occupied by the Charles J. McNamara family.

Miss Marguerite Bernice Larson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Larson was united in marriage to Mr. Charles Hamilton Harvey at the home of the bride's parents last evening. Rev. J. Wilfred Greenwood of the Michelson Memorial church officiated at the ceremony and the attendants were Miss Elsie Burke of Frederic and the bride's brother Ernest Larson. Following the ceremony a delicious wedding lunch was served. Mr. Harvey whose home is in Jacksonville, Florida, is employed in Detroit and the bride has also been in Detroit for some time, the couple arriving yesterday to be married at home. After a few days spent here they will return to Detroit where they will make their home.

Kaleidoscope of Tournament

The outside teams rabing for Beaverton. Vanderbilt getting beaten. Vanderbilt's midgets having hard time against the taller boys of opposite team. Score rising rapidly. Coach Buchanan smiling and optimistic. Midgets lose by large score. Coach always smiling, smiling. Coach Cushman betting for St. Joe. West Branch. St. Joe putting up hard fight against Beaverton. They win!! Mr. Cushman wins!! Players taut; every nerve tingling. Signal given—they're at it. Grayling boys win! Hurray! Three cheers for Hill. Fine school spirit among students. Bright array of colors. Red hats, and dresses shining out among the sombre darker colors of the crowd. Tired mothers with babies, young girls with smaller brothers or sisters, happy throngs of happy-go-lucky young boys and girls a mass of color and gaiety, older men and women, all relaxing from cares and worries enjoying the games. The Seniors selling refreshments. Louis Konvicka selling peanuts. Tiny Jean Brady leading yells. Teachers smiling and happy; old friends gathered together. Finally the trophies are awarded. Grayling, proud, strong and determined marches with firm step to be presented with the prize. Fenton, Brady, Wyllie, Harrison, Neal and Stinchcomb, a fine team—one to be proud of! Cheers, more cheering! The tournament is won and—over. America's greatest indoor sport is again proclaimed king by the vast multitude which teachers, students, and pals all gathered together for love of a common game—king of all—BASKETBALL!

Ten Commandments of Sportsmanship

- 1 Thou shalt finish the game thou beginnest.
- 2 Thou shalt take losses without excuses.
- 3 Thou shalt be humble in victory.
- 4 Thou shalt always play fair and abide by the rules.
- 5 Thou shalt honor the referee or umpire, the team mates.
- 6 Thou shalt share the glory of winning with the team mates.
- 7 Thou shalt be willing to give thine opponents every advantage they askst.
- 8 Thou shalt do teamwork unselfishly.
- 9 Thou shalt play for the sake of the game and the joy of playing.
- 10 Honor the game 'thou playest, for he who plays straight and hard, wins ever though he loses.

There seems to be, among the student body, a great deal of agitation concerning the voting for or against the student Creed which was given out to the students to look over before they decided whether to vote yes and accept the creed. It's your creed, students of Grayling High School, you drew it up, you had it polished by our Student Council, you're the ones to live up to it. Take that creed and examine it closely. Is there anything hard to live up to? Is there anything you can't do? No! It all comes within range of every one's mentality. Let's make it a success and make Grayling High school an outstanding school to attend. Remember Lincoln's famous words—"A government of the people, for the people, and by the people shall not perish from the earth."

Doings Of The Girls' Scout Troop

In the last meeting, the Girl Scouts were very busy selecting fitting names for the troop and for the two patrols. After some discussion the troop was named "The White Pine Troop." Then the girls were divided into patrols, the older girls—above fifteen years were organized as the Eagle Patrol with Evelyn Johnson as Patrol leader, and the younger girls selected the Beaver Patrol for their troop, placing Ruth Mack as leader. Annabelle Harris was made lieutenant. The only ones eligible for the position of lieutenant must be at least sixteen years of age.

The Beaver Patrol is expected to entertain the Eagles next week.

The following teams were awarded a cup or shield in the District Tournament:

St. Joe of West Branch won the shield for class D, while St. Mary's of Gaylord took the consolation cup. Grayling won the shield for class C, and Lake City took the consolation cup. A cup was awarded to the player who was the cleanest player, knew most of the game and played the best teamwork and kept his training rules. There were two fortunate boys, Amos Schreur of Gaylord and Charles Wyllie of Grayling chosen by the Board of Education. The cup was given to Amos Schreur because Grayling had already received one prize.

The Senior class took charge of the sale of refreshments at the tournament last week. A case was placed in the gym, containing candy, gum, pop and frostbites. There was such a large demand for frostbites that it was quite impossible to keep enough on hand. The class was divided into groups, each taking a turn at the selling. The Seniors were well pleased with the sales.

Very large crowds attended the Basket Ball Tournament which took place last Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

With Mr. Hill as cheer leader there was certainly some real rooting done during the games.

Most of the children came to school Friday morning and were dismissed again on account of the Gaylord and Lake City game which was supposed to have been played Thursday night.

Both the High School girls and boys went to Gaylord Monday morning to have pictures taken of the basket ball teams. These will be in the following papers: The Free Press, Detroit News, The Detroit Times and Crawford Avalanche

Monday, March 4, the high school students were given the opportunity to hear the inauguration of the president over the radio. This was enjoyed by all those present. Owing to the fact that some of the classes were omitted, the students were more attentive in return.

Theodore Wheeler of Detroit, visited school a week ago Thursday and Friday.

Arla Ewalt of Mackinaw City visited school a week ago Friday.

Many are the students that are looking forward to the spring vacation.

The Chemistry classes are giving their talks this week. These take the place of six weeks' tests. It is good practice for us who are some what timid when it comes to getting up in front of a group and talking. Some interesting subjects are discussed. The maximum amount of time is fifteen minutes and the speeches are supposed to be at least five minutes long.

The tournament is over and everyone is getting back to work. We

(By E. M. T. Service)

A selected list of 1900 Ohio physicians this week received literature from the office of the East Michigan Tourist, association telling the story of East Michigan's recreational appeals in text and picture. Health aspects of the East Michigan territory are being emphasized more and more by those familiar with it and physicians, not only in Ohio but in many sections of the country, are telling their patients about Michigan's pure air, pure water, mineral baths, etc.

Interesting Events In Grayling 23 Years Ago

INTERESTING ITEMS OF NEWS GATHERED FROM THE FILES
OF THE AVANCE OF 23 YEARS AGO.

Thursday, March 15, 1906
Summer is surely coming. The boys are playing marbles for keeps.

McCollough's team are drawing brick and lumber down the river for two new club houses to be built near the Detroit grounds. They are to be completed in time for the trout season.

The funeral service of Peter Vallad last week was one of the most largely attended of any ever held at the Catholic church in this village, proving that an every day honest man wins and holds the respect of the community in which he lives.

Mrs. Nelson Sharp continues to remain in a serious condition, necessitating the constant attendance of a nurse.

Amos Pearsall has secured a lease of the Central Hotel, and is busy as a bee putting it in first class order. Our citizens, and the traveling public, can be assured that the house will be run in a thoroughly respectable way, and help fill the need of our village for more and better hotel accommodations.

J. A. Morrison, manager of the Central drug store went to Detroit Saturday, and returned Tuesday morning.

O. Milnes was down from Frederic Tuesday, reporting all alive in our sister berg, and the hotel running smoothly.

Feb. 28th Mr. Elmer E. Knight and Miss Ada E. Rose both of Grayling, were united in marriage by Rev. J. F. Thompson, pastor of the M. E. church at the Knight house.

We are glad to know that Geo. Langevin, who was taken to the sanitarium last week suffering from septicaemia, is doing nicely, though he will lose the wounded finger.

Detroit reports the first real sleighing of the winter, last Sunday, and zero weather. Cleveland was a little ahead with five inches of the beautiful. Better move up here where all is lovely.

Maple Forest citizens are alive to the necessity of good roads, and for the coming election, Dr. Underhill, proprietor of the AuSable Ranch, is urged to accept the nomination for Highway commissioner. It is a good suggestion, as he could take time to attend to it, has experience, and the ability needed.

Died—At his home in this village Saturday, March 10th, George Ranger, aged 58 years, of edema of lungs. Deceased was a native of England, but has resided here for nearly twenty years, and a large part of that time has been employed on a railroad section. He leaves his wife and a daughter by adoption to mourn his loss.

Charles Amidon took a big load of ladies out for a sleighride last week and he seemed to know just where to take them for a good time. They went to Mr. Mortenson's in Beaver Creek where he unloaded them to the number of eighteen. It was soon dinner time and they were invited to the dining room where the table was filled with chicken and everything invited. The afternoon was passed away with games, and the ladies presented them with a lamp and when we got ready to come away, were invited to come again when we wanted a good time. If you want to make Mrs. Kraus and Mrs. Oaks laugh, just ask them how much they got a cord for cutting wood.

By some combination between our Typists or the work of the office "Devil," the announcement we had written of the birth of a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Allen B. Felling the last inst., did not appear. We suppose everybody is aware of the fact just the same, and the happy parents are congratulated on every hand.

STATE GEAR 22 IN ADVERTISING
FOR $1 EXPENSE UNDER MEASURE

(By E. M. T. Service)
Senate Bill No. 155, "To provide an appropriation of funds for advertising the State of Michigan," has been passed and signed by the Governor. It is now operative.

Under the provisions of the measure, the four tourist associations are charged with meeting the state appropriation dollar for dollar. Hence that state secures two dollars in advertising for every dollar that it spends. Not a cent of this money, either that advanced by the state or by the tourist associations to match the state funds, can be expended for overhead or administration expense.

Moreover, under the measure, the tourist associations will be under strict scrutiny. They must therefore function as carefully and effectively as in the past, if not more so.

Discussing the measure, T. F. Marston, secretary-treasurer of the East Michigan Tourist association, said: "So far as the East Michigan Tourist association is concerned, we must have $25,000 of our own funds for advertising, if we are to profit to the utmost under the measure. While the association has a part of this amount subscribed there is yet a considerable sum which must be raised. This must be raised at once."

"The overhead expense of the office will be slightly increased due to the fact that with $50,000 of advertising there will be more inquiries to answer, more booklets to be mailed and more postage to pay. The increased overhead will be small, yet however small, it must be taken care of by our general fund, no part of the state appropriation being available for this purpose."

"If East Michigan is to get its full share of results, those who are interested must get back of the association and help, not only by individual subscriptions but by seeing to it that others interested do their part. Here is an opportunity for this section to 'cash in' and it depends upon those interested whether we cash one hundred per cent or only to the extent of a part of the $50,000."

Takes Scalp of Veteran

John Van Ryn, sixth ranking tennis player of the United States, and rising candidate for the Davis Cup team, who beat Bill Tilden, who had been recently reinstated as an amateur player in good standing in the finals of the Brooklyn Helgata Cusino indoor invitation tournament.

J. W. Turton of Niles, Mich., has driven the three Ford automobiles he has owned a distance equal to nine times around the world, has never been out of gas, oil or water and has never had an accident. He purchased his first Ford, a touring car, in 1915, drove it 103,200 miles and then sold it for $125 cash.

SELF DIRECTION

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois

Cantner was standing in front of the old house in which he is living when I drove by this morning. He is rather a broken old man now, making an uncertain living by peddling his products from door to door. I recall that when I was a young fellow he had the best shop of his kind in town and we thought was due to become one of the well-to-do citizens of town. He had learned his trade early, he had shown more than commonplace talent in it, and when he was twenty-five or so had started an independent business of his own. He was an excellent worker, he knew his particular trade, and when working for some one else no one was better, but he could not manage himself. He had no business sense, no powers of self direction, and whatever he undertook ended in failure.

He tried first one thing and then another, but only when he was under the direction of some one else did he accomplish anything worth while. He had no self direction, he had no power of self direction. He had to have a manager or a boss to bring out the best that was in him. If he had been married it might have been different, but Cantner remained a bachelor, and so missed the chance of having a regular manager. There is no telling how many of us have been saved by marriage.

Cross knew a good deal about engineering. In fact, in college it looked as if he might become a really outstanding engineer. He had no initiative, however. He could follow directions admirably. If a piece of work were mapped out for him, he would carry it out to the last detail. It was when he was left to his own devices that he got into difficulty. When there was no one to give him directions he seemed lost, uncertain, feeble. He found it difficult to set himself at work; it seemed impossible for him to institute anything new or out of the ordinary routine. So long as he had a job under the supervision of another man things went well with him, but put him upon his own resources, and he was lost. He knew how to obey, but he had no understanding of how to command either himself or others. He has been out of college twenty years and is little further along the road to success than when he started.

Mrs. Gates has been telling me what a fine boy she has. He got out of high school a year ago, and ever since has had a good job. His boss has said all sorts of commendatory things about the boy, and his mother thinks he will make everyone sit up and take notice when he gets into college. It may be so.

Young Gates has never directed himself. His tasks have so far been set for him. He has been called in the morning by his mother; he has done during the day what his boss laid out for him. When he gets to college he will have to be self directing and that is an entirely different story.

Eats Big Steak And Fried Onions—No Gas

"Every time I ate I had terrible stomach gas. Now, thanks to Adlerika, I eat steak and fried onions and feel fine." Mrs. J. J. Jallan writes: "Just ONE spoonful Adlerika relieves gas, and that bloated feeling so that you can eat and sleep well. Acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removes old waste matter you never thought was there. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you.—Mac & Gidley, druggists."

Happy Lady Free Of Rheumatism After 15 Years

Former Sufferer Gratefully Pays
Glowing Tribute To Merits Of Famous Konjola

MRS. ADELAIDE WRIGHT

"How happy I am to be able to endorse this master medicine Konjola," said Mrs. Adelaide Wright, 25 Spencer street, Battle Creek, Michigan. "What joy has been given me, what wonder health can never be described in mere words. For the last fifteen years I suffered from stomach trouble and rheumatism. I was not able to eat a meal without suffering intensely afterward. Gas bloating was prevalent. But the rheumatic pains were worst of all. They settled in my arms, limbs, and shoulders. Often I thought I would not be able to endure the suffering any longer. It was a very discouraging situation."

"But Konjola then came into my life, and certainly made a most remarkable change. This modern medicine went right to work on my ailing organs, and before I hardly knew what was happening I was feeling much better. The stomach symptoms grew less severe, and then vanished altogether. Now my rheumatism has ended and I haven't the slightest pain in my whole body. To think that a single medicine could do all this! It sounds almost unbelievable, but every word is the truth. Konjola is, indeed, the master medicine of them all."

Konjola is sold in Grayling, Mich., at the Mac & Gidley drug store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

Of interest to every car owner: A statement of General Motors' Policy by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., President

THE public has been visiting the automobile shows in the larger cities of the country to see new models.

Suppose you could drop a curtain over the 1929 automobile shows and raise it immediately upon the shows of ten years ago. How vividly the changes would then appear!

Go back five years, or even three, and the contrasts are amazing. So fast have the improvements followed one another that every year has offered you more for your automobile dollar—in performance, in comfort, in safety, in beauty and in style. Never was this fact quite so impressive as in the cars now on display.

This is real progress, and inevitably General Motors has been a leader in it. You cannot have hundreds of engineers, in one organization, thinking and working day and night without knowing more about making automobiles than was known the year before. You cannot have great Research Laboratories, the Proving Ground and the unmatched resources and skill of Fisher body without developing constantly better processes and new ideas. The patronage of the public makes possible all this machinery of betterment; so the public is entitled to each improvement as promptly as it has been proved.

In this way came the self-starter, the closed body, the durable Duco finish, four wheel brakes. By the same process one of the remarkable feats in industrial history has just been effected: Chevrolet has been transformed into a six-cylinder car within the price range of the four—almost overnight. Similarly, the new brakes and transmissions of Cadillac and LaSalle are a fundamental improvement; while the new models of Buick, Oldsmobile, Oakland and Pontiac all represent values that could not have been offered before.

Such progress, born of the inherent ambition of an organization of active minds to do better and to give more, is of benefit to all. It offers you more for your money with each succeeding year. It gives you more value for your present car when you trade it in.

This is our policy. This is real progress.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., President

Detroit, March 1, 1929

MICHIGAN LEGISLATIVE NEWS LETTER

by unanimous vote. Then Mr. Anderson felt better.

The Senate has passed the Senon measure providing for a special tax commission. The bill carries an appropriation of not to exceed $25,000, for expenses of the commission. The measure had the unanimous vote of the Senate.

Sen. Lennon proposes a tobacco tax of $1.50 per 1000 on cigarettes and a 5% tax on all other forms of tobacco, the money to be used to reduce the general property tax. The measure receives more hearty support from the smokers of the legislature, apparently, than from the abstinents. The collections would be made from the wholesalers, which would simplify collections and reduce collection expense.

The administration furnished members early in the week with a report of expenditures made by authority of the state administrative board during the past two years. The report shows that the board made authorizations of about $2,500,000 for the period of a year and a half, of which something over a million had been expended. Representative DeLand, former secretary of state, who is bitterly anti-administration, sharply criticizes the action of the administration board and claims many of the expenditures are not warranted. He wants the money spent on legislative authorization rather than that of the administrative board, while the administrative board asks that the sum of one million dollars be provided for the board to expend at its discretion, as an emergency fund. Rep. Culver has introduced a bill which would do away with the state administrative board.

A concurrent resolution introduced by Rep. Warner would put up to a referendum the proposition of re-districting the state on a basis of citizenship rather than of population. The measure had its principal objectors from the metropolitan districts, but several of the Wayne representatives voted for it and it passed the House by a vote of 69 to 11. There are about 100,000 aliens in the state and it is said that fully half of them are in Wayne county.

Speaker Ming's amusement tax proposition is still held in the House ways and means committee, but Mr. Ming says that it will be amended and brought out later, with the proposition that the revenue thus obtained should go to the relief of the poorer school districts.

A private dinner party given by Rep. DeLand, at which it is asserted state matters were discussed, but which no member of the party seems willing to talk about, was severely criticized at another dinner party of legislators, not held privately. The members who were not members of either gathering are enjoying the incipient warfare which threatens to develop into more than a smoke screen in the near future. As a usual thing, Mr. DeLand seems to be perfectly willing to talk right out in the open and many members are wondering why all the mysterious secrecy.

The House Tuesday passed an appropriation bill of $200,000 for advertising the state, to be spent in a 50-50 plan by the tourist and resort associations of the state. The measure had already had the approval of the Senate. The House also passed a conservation measure introduced by Rep. Sargeant, increasing the salary of the director of conservation from $5,000 to $7,000. This bill also staggers the terms of members of the commission so that terms of old members will overlap with new ones, and provides that two members of the commission shall be from the upper peninsula.

A bill re-enacting the teachers' retirement fund law passed the House Tuesday. As it had already been approved by the Senate the bill now awaits only the signature of the governor.

A public hearing on the Lennon garnishment bill, which had been approved by the Senate, was held in the House chamber Wednesday before the judiciary committee. There was a large attendance and the hearing consumed all the forenoon. Retail merchants of the state are the most bitter opponents of the measure.

Rep. Hartman's bill proposing a three-fourth mill tax to take care of the proposed hospitalization improvements seems to meet with the approval of quite a number of the legislators and is said to have the support of Speaker Ming and of the administration. This would raise approximately five millions a year, claimed to be all that is urgently necessary. Many claim that a half mill tax would be sufficient.

Deeming it wise to "Support home industries," Rep. Otis Huff has introduced a bill repealing the five-day marriage license act. He recalls that Rep. Frank Darin, author of the law, went to Buffalo soon after the law was in effect, to be married, while only last week Senator Norman Horton, who sponsored the law in the Senate, took a day off to go to Ohio to be married.

Senator Condon has introduced a bill to make card and dice games illegal in pool and billiard halls, in towns of 5,000 population and over. He claims that in the larger cities these places are the breeding places of much crime and are the hang-outs of "gang" members.

An attempt to take from the state administrative board the function of designating location of trunk line highways failed and the House passed a bill authorizing additional highways to the extent of 500 miles, all of which it is claimed have already been allocated.

The Senate has spent much time this week arguing over tax matters and the taxation committees of both branches are holding almost continuous meetings in an effort to thresh things out to a satisfactory conclusion.

ion. Automobile license measures are also a hot topic in the Senate chamber and much discussion is rife.

Senator Lennon proposes a tax of 50 cents per $100 on all bonds, stocks, mortgages, etc., from outside the state, and another bill proposes a tax of 30 cents on each $100 on state, county, township, municipal, road and school bonds. Half of the proceeds to go to the state and half to the county. Another proposal is a license of 5 cents per square foot on all billboards and signs, except on buildings owned or occupied by the advertiser.

Black currants are put on the black list by Senator Campbell, because they produce white pine rust. His bill authorizes commissioner of agriculture to destroy all black currant bushes in the state.

Two conservation bills were passed by the House today, one giving more authority to fire wardens and one authorizing the state park commission to lease public service privileges in state parks.

Friday's grist of new bills in the House included one by Rep. Armstrong making it illegal for any candidate for office to fill out a questionnaire or to make pledges to support any particular measure, prior to election. One from Rep. Culver giving judges of probate discretionary powers to send crippled children to local or near-by hospitals for treatment. One from Rep. Huff to exempt from taxation property of Boy Scout camps.

Prospects are bright for appropriation matters to come into action during the coming week. If the budget, or the greater portion of it, can be on its way during the coming week it will help greatly toward bringing final adjournment within the range of vision.

News Briefs

W. James Olson returned Wednesday from a trip to Saginaw.

There will be confirmation services in the Danish-Lutheran church Sunday, March 24th.

St. Mary's Altar society met at the home of Mrs. Holger F. Peterson Tuesday afternoon for sewing.

About forty couples took in the dance at the Temple Saturday night given by the Synopsators, and all report a fine time.

T. E. Douglas, Nash car and Stewart truck dealer, has secured the services of John Stephan for his auto mechanic for this season.

Miss Isa Granger has been absent from her duties at the Kerry & Hanson Co. offices for a few days owing to an injury to her left foot.

There will be a St. Patrick's dance at the home of John Canfield in Beaver Creek Saturday night, to which all are cordially invited.

Mrs. Frank Tetu was dismissed from Mercy Hospital Saturday having recovered from her illness. Their little son Francis is still at the hospital however.

Albert Lewis was nominated for the office of supervisor of Frederic township. That will mean the retirement of Floyd Goshorn who has served that township as supervisor for many years.

Mrs. R. D. Bailey, who has been spending the winter months in Miami, Florida in company with her daughter Miss Janice has returned to her home in Gaylord. Miss Janice will remain in Florida until sometime in May.

Saturday afternoon, March 23rd, St. Mary's Altar society will hold a bake sale at the Schjotz grocery. They will have a large variety of baked goods including Danish and other fancy pastries. Also on that day they will give away a large covered lunch basket filled with several dozens of eggs and a smoked ham.

Fifteen ladies of Our Gang Sewing club braved the snowdrifts and went to the home of Mrs. Henry Feldhauser Thursday afternoon for their regular weekly social gathering. Sewing and games were the order and a most delicious lunch ending a pleasant afternoon.

At the Tuesday evening meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the American Legion, the committee on the recent bake sale reported the amount of $11.60 as the result of their efforts. The organization only boasts of 15 members, but with the kind assistance of outsiders they have this nice sum to add to their treasury. Their appreciation is hereby extended to those ladies who were so generous in sending baked goods for the sale.

The condition of Nels P. Olson, who was stricken with paralysis on Tuesday morning of last week remains about the same. His many friends are anxiously awaiting more encouraging news, trusting that he will be able to be up and around again soon. Alfred Olson of Detroit and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Olson of Pontiac, who were here owing to their father's illness have returned to their homes, while Mr. and Mrs. W. James Olson are still in the city.

R. H. Gillett was home from Bay City over Sunday and while here sold their home to Mr. and Mrs. Emil Niederer. Mr. and Mrs. Gillett will move to Bay City the first of next week, where Mr. Gillett has gone into the manufacturing business. They came to Grayling about 12 years ago when Mr. Gillett took over the management of the Grayling Dowel and Tie Plug Co. Mr. Gillett served as president of Grayling Board of Trade and both he and Mrs. Gillett have been valuable community workers during their residence in the city. They have many friends here who are sorry to lose them.

Boy Baker, head of the local department of the A. S. T. company was in Grayling Saturday assisting in the market.

Miss Nina Sorenson returned the last of the week from Lansing, where she had been taking the state nurses' examination.

A special musical feature at Michaelson Memorial church next Sunday will be a vocal duet by Rev. J. W. Greenwood and Mr. Webb. They will sing "Savior More Than Life to Me," by Fannie Crosby.

Special on the Lenten program of St. Mary's church will be the illustrated lecture to be given by Fr. Culligan next Wednesday evening March 20th. Anyone wishing to be invited to attend. The lecture will be on the sacrifice of the mass.

The fourth of the series of Lenten teas that are being given by the Woman's Home Missionary society will take place at the home of Mrs. Menno Corwin Wednesday afternoon, March 20th. Mrs. Carl Hanson and Mrs. Alfred Hanson will be the other hostesses.

The new State Police headquarters at South Harrison road, East Lansing, will be formally dedicated at 2:00 p. m. Friday, March 15th. The principal speakers will be Gov. Green; Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of State police of Pennsylvania; Wilbur Brucker, attorney general, and Roy C. Vandercok, the first state commissioner.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Nelson entertained the following at their home over the basket ball tournament, the latter's two sisters and brother, Misses Emma and Edna and Carl Hanson, and the Misses Vivian Houghton and Nellie Aiken, all of Houghton Lake. Miss Emma Hanson, who is a graduate of Grayling High School teaches in the Houghton Lake schools.

The choir of Michaelson Memorial church will give another of their fine sacred cantatas at the church Sunday evening, March 24th. This will be an Easter cantata. Due to the fact that there are a number of teachers in the choir the cantata will be held on the above date instead of Easter Sunday when many of the teachers will be away on their vacations. As usual the cantata will be under direction of Mrs. Clippert. The program will be published in our next issue.

FREDERIC SENIOR CLASS PLAY MAR. 15

Stop! Look! Listen! The seniors of the Frederic high school have changed the date of their play, "The Dearest Thing in Boots" from March 7 to March 15th.

Please remember the date and attend this play which will be rendered in the gymnasium of the Frederic high school for the benefit of the Senior class. Excellent music will be furnished and other specialties that will be very pleasing to the audience. If you come, you will laugh, grow fat, and be prepared for a most enjoyable week end.

The price of admission will be 35 cents for adults and 10 cents for children. Dinner will be served in the basement beginning promptly at 5:30 and ending at 7:30 Standard time.

There will also be a chance to buy some of the best home made candy you ever ate.

The price of the dinner will be 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children.

This play which will begin promptly at 8 o'clock is one of the most amusing you ever read. The teachers have given their class considerable practice and we believe if you come that you will feel you have had the worth of your money, and at the same time you will help our Senior class.

THE NEW PRESIDENT

The country has a new president. The United States of America has no royalty. The inauguration of a president is more than a mere event. It is evidence of democracy. It tells of the kind of a government that the nation has.

Herbert Clark Hoover will be a great president. He is not a politician. He lacks many of what have usually been the political qualifications for high office. But he possesses some qualities that will prove outstanding.

Mr. Hoover goes into office with the respect and confidence of the American people. Back of him are wonderful traditions. Ahead lie opportunities. The United States is a great nation. To be its head is both an honor and a responsibility.

OUR LEADERS

Calvin Coolidge is now a private citizen of the United States of America.

While thousands were cheering the inauguration of his successor he quietly boarded a train for his old home, content to let history write the final chapters of his life as a public servant.

In the quiet and peaceful succession of our leaders lies the strength of this nation.
